Oregon Litigation Diagram 10.19.12.pptx

Hi Adrianne, here's a copy of the diagram. This is something I talked about with Dave Croxton to show the amount of OR-related litigation and an overview of the subjects. I had to pull this together quickly and should've cc'ed you on a version I sent out a couple of days ago. There may be legal inaccuracies that we can correct later, but it's intended to give an overview and a visual to the extent of current and potential litigation-related issues that we're seeing in the programs.

Here's the latest draft, so if you have any corrections, please feel free to send by today. I know that you're really busy, though, so if you don't have time to look over the details carefully, the program staff have taken a quick look so that's the level of review that's taken place.

It's very dense, and we intend to enlarge it into a poster. I don't know how you'd like to use the diagram whether it's to just give an overview or to walk through the litigation. I suspect that going through each of them would take a long time, so perhaps there could be some big picture messages about our current path with NWEA not being sustainable and some of the common themes (ESA consultation, WQS, TMDLs, and more recently OR CZARA). I'll make the changes this weekend.

David, Jenny Wu is doing a litigation diagram. She's coordinating it with Adrienne. Perhaps it would be useful to identify key litigation decision points/schedule junctures for the next six months to a year.

Thanks Christine. Do you think we need a "short background document" on litigation or ORC issues? If so, what would that look like?

I hope this is on your schedules. Here's the agenda for our briefing. It's a bit jam packed and a bit of an experiment. The expectation that we will spin off specific issues for more in-depth briefings.

In addition to the attached agenda, folks will bring short background documents on specific issues as needed/as appropriate.
